A SLOW START

Well 2015 is here and it has been a bit of a slow start to the year for us.

Summer and winter are a time for simply working away at changes to the website as the weather isn't ideal for travelling to new areas.

Our Augusta trip in December wasn't exactly a research trip but we did manage to take a few photos and put up a travel blog page featuring the town:

Just before we went to Augusta we went on a night tour of Fremantle Prison. It was very entertaining and a very different feel to the day tours we had done previously.

We stayed overnight in Fremantle and our comments on both the tour and accommodation can be found on the following pages:

Our final destination for 2014 was the Perth Mint. Having lived just up the road from the Mint years ago and never going to have a look at it, I decided it was about time.

Although it was interesting, I have to admit to feeling a little disturbed by the place and you can find out why on our review page:

We are off to Albany for a few days in February so hopefully we will have some new pictures and maybe some video to share once we get back.

CAMERA PRACTISE

The new camera gear has certainly made some aspects of photography a little easier but there is some way to go yet before we reach the top of the learning curve.

We still have to buy a proper wildlife lens to get better close up shots but it is a case of, so far, so good.

This months newsletter is a bit shorter than usual but if you want to find out more about us and our websites, we have updated our 'About Us' page at:
